Philadelphia Campaign in the Headlines

Using a variety of primary source materials as well as place based learning, participants will explore the 1777-1778 Campaign around Philadelphia. The Philadelphia Campaign was a pivotal turning point in the American Revolution and is easily explored today in the historic areas surrounding Philadelphia. This professional development workshop will provide teachers with primary source materials, instructional strategies, and history content to enrich teaching the American Revolution.

When: July 10 – 14, 2017

Where: Sessions will begin at Valley Forge and travel to various sites including Brandywine, Paoli, Philadelphia, and Germantown. Bus transportation will be provided to all sites.

Cost: $100

All participants receive:

- Books and resource materials.
- Behind-the-scenes looks at historic places and their collections.
- 40 hours of continuing education credits.
- 40 additional hours of credit for submitting a lesson plan.
